Q Mahatma Gandhji considered peace as an ethical issue rather than political one. Do you agree with this view? comment?

A letter published in Harijan → Gandhi wrote – "The moral influence would be used on the side peace"

This letter explain Gandhiji psychology as a moral leader at the time of war, he was a man peace, who beyond the violent values of his time, could struggle for Non-violence & dialogue among nation.

Gandhi believed if there is a choice between violence cowardice so he advice d go for violence. but he also believed that non-violence is superior to violence forgiveness is more manly than punishment. but forgiveness only when there is the power to punish.

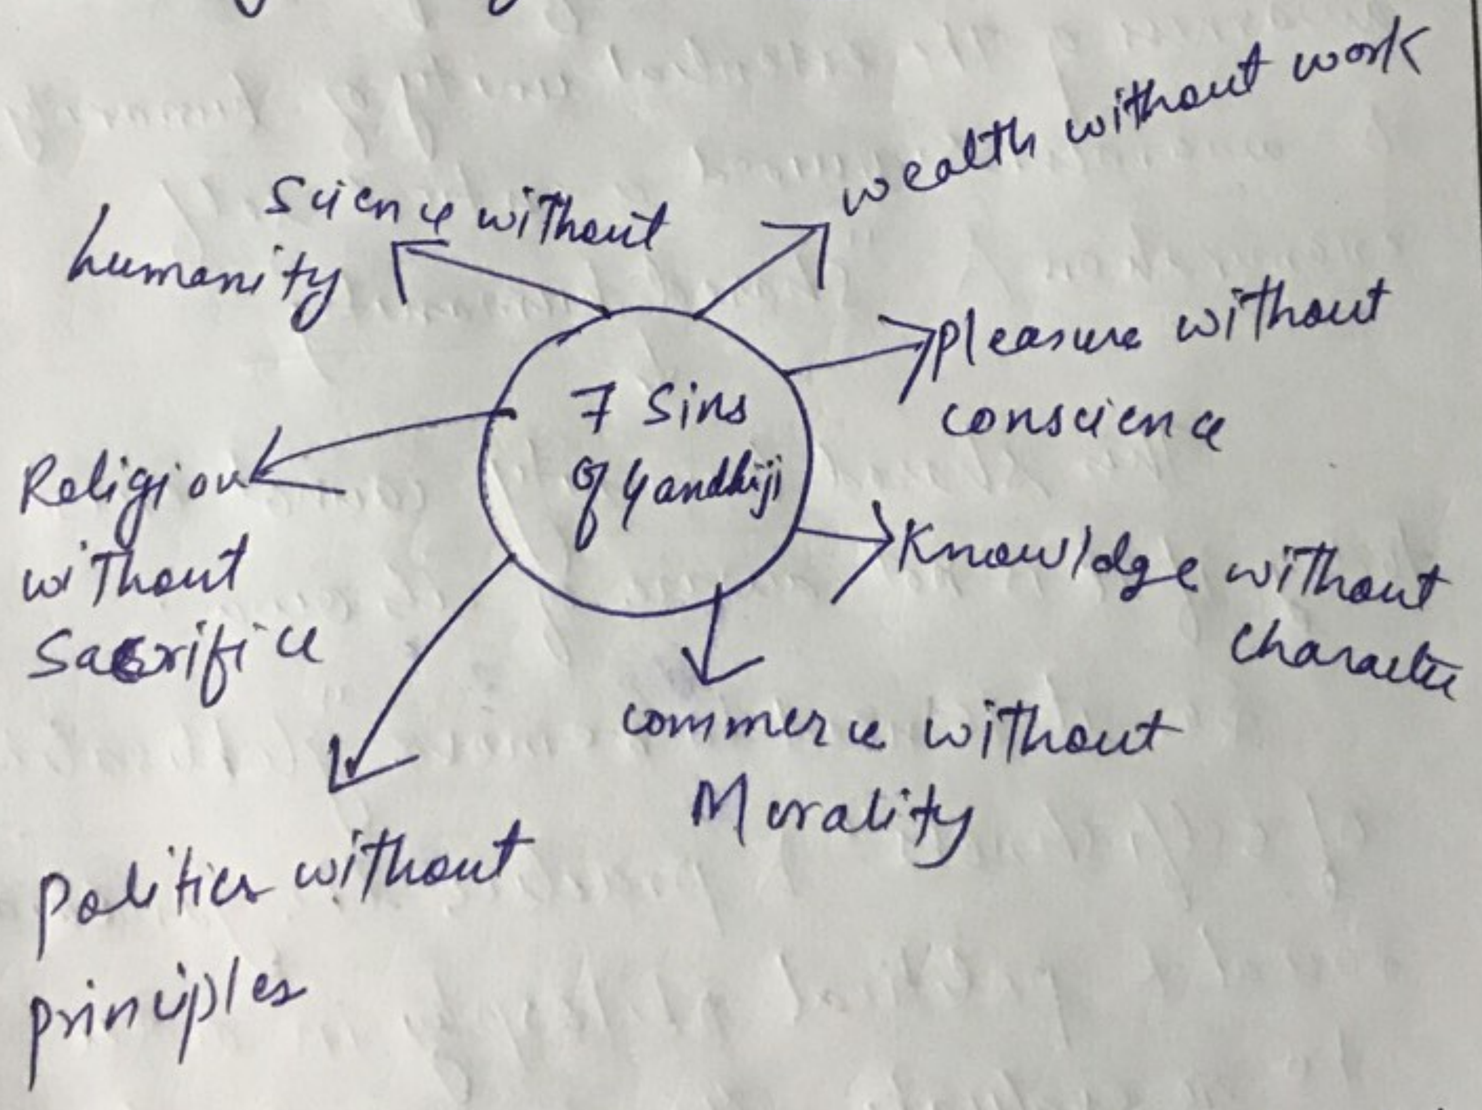
In India Gandhiji always go for peace rather than violence. he said britishers never thought India is a country only they wanted to rule over there.

Gandhiji never blame britishers he blamed Britisher's thought, perception about India, that's why Gandhiji wants India with peace & non-violence rather than any kind of violence.



All this 7 sins talk about Morality, pleasure, wealth, humanity with peace & harmony.

In recent ~~the~~ scenario many political parties playing with citizens sentiments They want to create mis-harmony or create ~~no~~ violence conditions like → ~~Do~~, in religious matter, they create a political tools rather than to create harmony in nation.

Gandhiji said violence damages & undermine all forms of life. & wanted awarness of the essential unity of humanity, & awarness required a critical self examination & "shared humanity"

↓

This shared humanity cannot exist today if it is not aware of its own.

So, it is need to remove "globlisation of selfishness" & practice the gandhian social & political philosphy in order to re-evaluate the concept of peace
