

A Reflection on NCRB Data

What is the issue?

 $n\n$

The latest NCRB data calls for the governments to study the underlying causes for the crimes and focus on building a better inclusive society.

 $n\n$

What do the findings reflect and call for?

 $n\n$

\n

 Police Reforms - Basic issues such as modernising the police, recruiting the right candidates and teaching them to uphold human rights should be given priority.

\n

- The orders of the Supreme Court on police reforms issued in 2006 will have to be implemented in letter and spirit by all States.
- The police forces should comply with the directions of recording crimes with greater sensitivity.

۱n

- \bullet Genuine measures for a more transparent and socially accountable Ministerial superintendence over the police should be put in place. \n
- This would help eliminating the political interference in criminal justice delivery system and raise public confidence in its working.
- Urban It is often argued that urban India, being a melting pot of communities and identities, is less oppressive towards Dalits.
- However, the data on atrocities against Dalits has proven this long-held view wrong.

\n

- As, urban centres reflect to a large extent the social mores and power relations of rural hinterlands, instead of being an accommodative society.
- Evidently, Lucknow and Patna top the list of cities that have reported the highest percentage of atrocities against Dalits.

- Also, there is a distinct urban geography for violence against women.
- Evidently, Delhi and Mumbai have turned out to be the least safe cities for women.

\n

- A progressive Constitution and numerous laws have empowered the Dalits, but these have not ended caste discrimination.
- \bullet In fact, the politicisation and empowerment of the Dalit community has resulted in a backlash with counter-mobilisations. $\mbox{\sc h}$
- This is certainly by communities that are reluctant to give up their social, economic and political privileges.
- Social development Last year's data indicate that there is a rise in the number of cases involving juveniles.
- \bullet Social development should thus be seriously focused as an instrument of reducing the crime rate. $\ensuremath{\backslash n}$
- A focussed programme to universalise education and skills training would potentially keep juveniles from coming into conflict with the law.

 $n\n$

 $n$

Source: The Hindu, Indian Express

\n

