- Inadequacy of individual rights - Individualistic rights under Articles 14-18 (equality), 19 (free speech) and 25 (freedom of religion) are not enough for the conservation of language, script or culture which comes under Article 29.
- Group discrimination - One may not be individually unjustly treated but it hurts, if the group to which one belongs is subjected to ridicule or denied any value.
- An individual's right to culture holds little meaning or significance, unless the community of which a person is a member of, or is identified with, is accorded the right to exist in a viable form.
- Cultural conservation - Linguistic and religious cultures are valuable for their member and they need to be given explicit rights to conserve their own culture.
- Conducive environment - Cultural conservation requires not only the presence of a group that shares a common culture but a conducive environment in which such cultures can flourish.
- Ensuring equality - Conferring the right on minorities under Article 30 is to ensure that there will be equality between the majority and the minority.

A seven judge Bench in Aligarh Muslim University (2024) in unequivocal terms described Article 30 as a 'facet of equality and non-discrimination'.

- Prevent majoritarian domination - Minority cultures face disadvantages in a majoritarian society and special rights are need to balance the strength of majoritarianism.
- Basic structure - In Keshavananda Bharati (1973), rights under Article 30 were held to be part of the basic structure which even Parliament cannot change through a constitutional amendment.
