

Delhi's Green Budget

Why in news?

\n\n

Delhi released its first Green budget to improve quality of air in the National Capital Region.

\n\n

What is the significance of the green budget?

\n\n

\n

- Under the green budget Delhi has announced many new programmes under four Departments namely Environment, Power, Transport and PWD.

\n

- Some of the initiatives includes 1,000 new fully electric buses, subsidies for electric vehicles, LED street lamps and incentives for residential and agricultural users who install solar panels.

\n

- The government has proposed to give incentive to industries to switch over to piped natural gas and subsidies to firms to switch over to clean fuel-based power generators.

\n

- Apart from these, first comprehensive city-wide inventory of greenhouse gas emissions will also be carried out.

\n

- Dedicated information system showing levels of pollution will be set up inside all government buildings.

\n

- Government has also planned for an innovative scheme named Agriculture-cum-Solar Farm scheme.

\n

\n\n

What are the challenges in implementing these programmes?

\n\n

\n

- The Delhi Transport Corporation has 6,000 buses, but it needs to maintain a fleet size of 11,000 buses.
\n
- An addition of 1,000 new electric buses may mean lesser emissions, but it does little to address the overall supply gap.
\n
- This means more private vehicles on the street and consequently a greater dose of pollution.
\n
- The primary sources of pollution vary seasonally like in winter, it is the crop burning in neighbouring Uttar Pradesh, Punjab and Haryana that affects Delhi's air quality.
\n
- And in summer, it is dust from construction, storms, roads, etc.
\n

\n\n

What measures needs to be taken in this regard?

\n\n

- Tackling the existing problems needs coordination between different states bordering the national capital, and also with the Union government.
\n
- Thus synchronizing with the efforts of neighbouring governments is needed to tackle these issues effectively.
