Prelims: Current events of national and international importance | Economy

Why in News?

Economic sanctions are frequently in the headlines because they remain a key tool of foreign policy in current global conflicts.

- Economic sanctions These are measures imposed on a country, group, or individual to change their attitude or behaviour.
 - Sanctions cut off a country's resources, money, and trade to pressure its leaders to change policies and to comply with specific demands.
- Different means of imposing sanctions -
 - Restriction of trade (banning imports and exports) & investments,
 - Freezing financial assets,
 - Limiting access to international banking systems,
 - Travel bans, or other measures that restrict economic activity.
- Common in international relations Economic sanctions have been employed by states & international organisations such as the United Nations (UN) -
 - $_{\circ}$ To address issues like human rights abuses, territorial disputes, or nuclear proliferation.
 - To create external pressure on countries having riotous internal affairs. Example: Cuban Revolution
- US sanctions on Cuba In 1958, the USA imposed sanctions on Cuba during the overthrow of dictator Fulgencio Batista by Fidel Castro.
- Initially started as an arms-only prohibition, it later spread to other products.
- Reason To ensure the granting of improved human rights and freedoms by Cuba's current government.
- Impacts
- Economic sanction It is the primary method through which sanctions exert pressure is by causing economic pain.
 - Example Trade restrictions can cause a shortage of goods and services, higher prices, and inflation, leaving even the wealthy without resources.

- Diplomatic isolation By reducing a country's ability to form alliances or limit its influence in global affairs
 - This weakens its power internationally and blocks access to capital markets, limiting its ability to fund government projects.

Dual Purpose of Sanctions

- Direct impact Impose economic pain to force behavioral change.
- Symbolic message Signal disapproval and reinforce international norms, even if practical effects are limited.

· Criticisms -

- Ethical concerns Civilians often suffer more than elites.
- Humanitarian crises Shortages of food, medicine, and essential services.
- Unintended consequences Targets may turn to adversarial nations (e.g., China or Russia) for support.
- Strengthening regimes May lead to the rallying of internal power to hold onto their administration.
 - For example, in North Korea, sanctions have helped to consolidate state power rather than weaken it.
