

Ending the 'Great Game' in Afghanistan

What is the issue?

\n\n

\n

- A recent IS attack in Kabul and Taliban's new announcement have signalled an increased security challenge for Afghanistan.

\n

- At this juncture, global and regional powers must desist from playing the 'Great Game' and build peace.

\n

\n\n

What is the recent IS attack?

\n\n

\n

- A bomb attack took place in Kabul at a voter registration centre, killing more than 50.

\n

- It carries a doubly dangerous message from the Islamic State.

\n

- One, it was the group's attack on Afghanistan's fragile democratic process.

\n

- It implies that elections next year could face more violence.

\n

- Two, a majority of the victims were Shias.

\n

- This highlights the sectarian turn in the conflict.

\n

\n\n

What is the Taliban threat?

\n\n

\n

- Taliban has rejected Afghan President Ghani's offer of talks "without preconditions".

\n

- Moreover, Taliban has announced its new “spring offensive”.
- It includes the targeting of American forces in Afghanistan.

\n\n

Have the earlier efforts paid results?

\n\n

- Last year, the U.S. announced a new ‘South Asia policy’ for Afghanistan. Click here to know more.
- It was officially welcomed by both New Delhi and Kabul.
- It was hailed as a game-changer for the region.
- But now the policy itself seems uncertain.
- The U.S. administration has taken some steps on Pakistani funding of terrorism.
- This is particularly across the Durand Line (border between Pakistan and Afghanistan).
- However, it has clearly not yielded calm on the ground.
- Continuous wave of terrorist violence has lashed Kabul and other cities.
- The Afghan forces control just a little over half the territory today.
- It is down from nearly three-fourths in 2015.
- The U.S. policies guiding Afghanistan are not making much headway.
- This is the same with Kabul’s efforts to protect its own people.

\n\n

What is the concern with the approach?

\n\n

- Growing U.S.-Russia tensions are creating space for proxies for both on Afghan soil.

\n

- The attacks by al-Qaeda and IS-related terror groups have their roots in the larger war between Iran and the Arab world.

\n

- Tensions between India and Pakistan cast a shadow over Afghanistan.

\n

- China, to secure itself from Islamist groups, is trying to build a rival military base in Afghanistan.

\n

- Clearly, countries are motivated not only by peace in Afghanistan but by other interests too.

\n

- Efforts have been made for bilateral and multilateral peace talks in recent months.

\n

- But each one has amounted to too piecemeal an effort.

\n

\n\n

What could possibly be done?

\n\n

\n

- There is a need to stop the 'Great Game' by countries for influence in Afghanistan.

\n

- It is necessary for both US and Afghanistan to take a more hard-headed, realistic view.

\n

- It must be acknowledged that the current situation is a danger to all.

\n

- Defeating terrorism in Afghanistan needs every stakeholder to put aside the differences and build peace.
