

Global Listing of Indian Companies - SEBI

Why in news?

 $n\n$

The Securities and Exchange Board of India (SEBI) has constituted an expert committee, which is considering allowing India-incorporated companies to list on foreign stock markets.

What is the need?

 $n\n$

\n

• For corporations with investment plans, raising finance locally had been hard in recent years.

\n

 Access to bank finance has become difficult as a result of Indian banks' huge bad debt.

۱'n

The weakening rupee has made foreign borrowing a risky proposition.

• Also, India's corporate bond market still lacks some potential.

What are the benefits?

 $n\n$

\n

• Overseas listing offers access to a wider, global pool of relatively cheap risk capital.

۱'n

- This avenue was open to Indian companies via the American Depository Receipts (ADRs), Global Depository Receipts (GDRs).
- But the modus operandi is complicated in these modes.
- · Companies had to set up holding companies or special purpose vehicles and intermediaries (depository participants) to avail these.

۱n

• This makes it unworkable for mid-size and smaller companies in terms of time and cost.

\n

• Further, most reputed bourses have stringent norms of disclosure and transparency.

۱n

• Direct listing in these would raise the standards for Indian companies.

• As companies still lack global best practices, despite reforms in accountancy standards recently.

\n

• The gains for Indian shareholders too can be significant.

What are the challenges?

 $n\n$

\n

• SEBI has to synchronise its regulatory architecture with the leading global bourses.

\n

 $n\n$

۱n

 \bullet The treatment of such inflows of foreign funds is another issue.

\n

 \bullet This gains significance both with $\underline{monetary\ policy}$ imperatives as well as $\underline{economic\ policy}.$

\n

- \bullet This is especially true in sectors with foreign direct investment restrictions. $\mbox{\ensuremath{\backslash}} n$
- Taxation issues will be another complex issue to handle in this regard.
- All of these suggest that direct listing will not be an innovation that SEBI will materialise any time soon.
- However, there are significant gains to be garnered for both sets of players in such overseas listings norms.
