\n
- InvITs are similar to mutual funds.
\n
- While mutual funds provide an opportunity to invest in equity stocks, an InvIT allows one to invest in infrastructure projects such as road and power.
\n

\n\n

How do InvITs work?

\n\n

\n
- InvITs raise funds from a large number of investors and directly invest in infrastructure projects or through a special purpose vehicle.
\n
- Two types of InvITs have been allowed: One, which invests in completed and revenue generation infrastructure projects; the other, which has the flexibility to invest in completed or under-construction projects.
\n
- InvITs which invest in completed projects take the route of public offer of its units, while those investing in under construction projects take the route of private placement of units.
\n
- Both forms are required to be listed on stock exchanges.
\n

\n\n

How do InvITs help the developer?

\n\n

\n
- InvITs allow developers of infrastructure assets to monetise their assets by pooling multiple projects under a single entity (trust structure).
\n
- For instance, IRB InvIT constitutes six special purpose vehicles consisting of toll-road assets aggregating to 3,645 lane kilometres of highways located across the states of Maharashtra, Gujarat, Rajasthan, Karnataka and Tamil Nadu.
\n

\n\n

What is the structure of InvITs?

\n\n

\n
- InvITs are registered as trusts with SEBI and there are four parties — trustee, sponsors, investment manager and project manager.
\n
- Sponsors are the firms which set up the InvITs.
\n
- Investment managers manage assets and investments of InvITs and undertake activities of the InvIT.
\n
- The project manager is responsible for executing the projects.
\n
- The trustee oversees the role of InvIT, investment managers and project manager and ensures that all rules are complied with.
\n

\n\n

For which class of investors are InvITs suitable?

\n\n

\n
- The minimum application size for InvIT units is Rs. 10 lakh.
\n
- The main investors could be foreign institutional investors, insurance and pension funds and domestic institutional investors (like mutual funds, banks) and also super-rich individuals.

\n

\n\n

What do InvITs mean to investors?

\n\n

\n
- According to SEBI rules, at least 90% of funds collected, after paying for expenses, taxes and repayment of external debt, should be passed on to investors every six months.
\n
- Dividend income received by unit holders is tax exempt.
\n
- Short-term capital gain on sale of units is taxed at 15%, while long-term capital gains are tax exempt.
\n
- Interest distributed to unit holders is taxed.
\n

\n\n

What are the potential investment risks?

\n\n

\n
- InvITs are listed on and are subjected to the vagaries of the stock exchanges, resulting in negative or lower returns than expected.
\n
- An economic downturn or project delays may hit infrastructure projects and result in lower returns.
\n
- As in mutual funds, investors in InvITs have no control over investments and exits being made by the trust.
