

Issues with RERA

Why in news?

 $n\n$

Recently a new piece of legislation governing the real estate sector came into force.

 $n\n$

What is Real Estate Regulation and Development Act (RERA)?

 $n\n$

\n

- It was proposed in 2009 and got implemented in the year 2016.
- The aim of the Act is to safeguard the interest of home buyers in the primary real estate market.

\n

- $\bullet$  The Act stipulates compulsory registration of all the residential projects with plot size more than 500 sq. meters. \n
- The developer will need to disclose draft of builder buyer agreements, to the authority.

\n

• A clear picture of the number of units sold and construction status also has to be disclosed.

\n

- Incorrect or incomplete disclosure will attract a penalty of 5% of project cost.
- Buyer will be able to get information on defaulting developers.
- $\bullet$  It has been decided that a developer can sell only on the basis of usable area.  $\n$
- This helps a home buyer understand how much he is paying for each sq. ft that he will get for his use.

How this law will be implemented?

\n

• RERA is a central law, its implementation requires the co-operation of state governments.

\n

 $\bullet$  The law requires each state and Union Territory to set up its own real estate regulatory authority.

۱n

- $\bullet$  It will be this authority that should frame the rules under which the Act will operate in that state or Union Territory.  $\$
- All the projects and agents operating in the state are supposed to register with this state-level regulatory authority within three months of the notification of the Act.

\n

- $\bullet$  This provides important transparency to buyers.
- A web site need to be maintained by the state level regulator, so that buyer can check the details of the project's regulatory filings.

 $n$

What are the issues with the implementation?

 $n\n$

\n

• Many state governments are lagging in the full and proper implantation of the Act.

\n

- Out of 36 only 24 states and Union Territories had not set up regulatory authorities and 16 had failed to notify their rules.
- The real estate sector has been highly affected by demonetisation and GST tax regimes.

\n

- Many projects and agents have to wait leading to a slow pace of registration.
- For instance, only three projects were reported as having been registered in Rajasthan.

\n

- In Mumbai, although there may be as many as 800 real estate projects under way in the city proper, not one had sought registration.
- Some major disruption of business seems inevitable for the sector.
