

Maharashtra Special Public Security Bill, 2024

Prelims: Current Events of National and International Importance

Why in the News?

Recently the Maharashtra Assembly passed the Maharashtra Special Public Security Bill, 2024, aimed at preventing “unlawful activities of Left-Wing Extremist organisations or similar groups”.

Key features of the bill

- The Bill defines certain activities by an individual or an organisation as unlawful.
- Unlawful Activities mentioned in the bill - Any action or speech that constitutes
 - Danger to public order,
 - Incites violence,
 - Disrupts communication, or
 - Encourages disobedience to established law and its institutions.
- Advisory Board - The Bill constitutes an Advisory Board to examine the decision to designate an organisation as unlawful.
- The designation comes into effect only after approval from the Board.
- Offences under the Bill - Being a member of an unlawful organisation, attending its activities, promoting its meetings, managing its affairs, or planning or committing unlawful activities.
- Contributing or soliciting contributions as a non-member will also be punishable.
- Penalties and Enforcement - Offences are cognisable and non-bailable, with jail terms of 2-7 years and fines up to Rs.5 lakh.
- Forfeiting properties - Authorities can seize and forfeit properties and funds linked to unlawful groups, sometimes before trial, with limited judicial oversight.
- Administrative Powers - District magistrates and police commissioners can notify, evict, and seize assets tied to banned organisations.
- The Bill allows for expedited prosecution, bypassing higher-level approval for certain actions.

Similar Laws in Other States

• Chhattisgarh Vishesh Jan Suraksha Adhiniyam, 2005 - Empowers the state to ban extremist organisations, seize assets, and prosecute members, upheld by the High Court in 2014.

• Andhra Pradesh Public Security Act, 1992 - Provides for banning Naxal organisations and criminalising support structures.

• Telangana and Odisha Public Security Laws -Telangana inherited Andhra Pradesh's framework; Odisha uses the Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1908, to ban extremist groups.

• Common Features - All these laws enable swift action against extremist networks, asset forfeiture, and criminalise association—Maharashtra's Bill closely mirrors these provisions.

- Concerns - Broad and Stringent Provisions - The bill's wide definitions could target legitimate dissent, student groups, and protest movements.
- Civil society and opposition parties argue it risks misuse, bypasses judicial safeguards, and duplicates existing laws like UAPA and MCOCA.
- Ambiguity and Potential for Misuse - Ambiguous definitions of "unlawful activity" and "extremist organisation" may lead to arbitrary enforcement.
- Concerns persist over civil liberties, freedom of association, and the potential chilling effect on democratic expression.
- Balancing Security and Rights - The Bill aims to address urban extremism but must ensure safeguards to prevent overreach and protect democratic freedoms, reflecting ongoing debates seen in other states.
