What are the implications of the recent talks?

\n

• It ended without any decisive conclusions.

\n

- India demanded a Director General of Military Operations (DGMO) level talk.
- DGMOs of the two nations last met in December 2013, after a gap of 14 years.

\n

• But Pak army has refused to offer such talks, probably fearing that it would be perceived as a sign of weakness.

۱n

 \bullet It is also yet to declare its causalities in LoC tensions. $\ensuremath{\backslash n}$

What are the other channels of negotiations?

 $n\n$

\n

- \bullet India-Pakistan armies usually engage through weekly telephone calls between the two Military Operations (MO) directorates. $\mbox{\sc Nn}$
- A Brigadier from the Indian MO directorate and a Colonel from the Pakistani MO directorate usually talk on Tuesday mornings.
- The two DGMOs would also talk by telephone, if there is an urgent requirement.

\n

- The two sides have used the emergency hotline mechanism in recent months to complain about particular incidents on the LoC.
- Apart from armies the DGs of Border security forces of both nations meet annually alternately in the two countries.
- Track-2 engagement, mainly involving retired diplomats, military officials and commentators, mostly takes place in third countries.
- \bullet But these meetings have limited value and scope, unless blessed by the respective governments. $\mbox{\sc h}$
