

Menstrual hygiene as a Fundamental Right

Prelims: Current events of national and international importance | Polity

Why in News?

Recently, the Supreme Court of India recognized access to menstrual hygiene as a fundamental right.

- Aim - To ensure dignified, equal, and uninterrupted access to education for girl students.
- To mandate adequate menstrual hygiene facilities in schools.
- Constitutional Basis - Article 14 (Equality before the law) - Under the concept of substantive equality, equal treatment may require unequal support to address disadvantage.
- Article 21 (Right to Life & Dignity) - Menstrual hygiene is integral to dignity, bodily autonomy, and privacy.
- Right to Education (RTE Act, 2009) - The term “free education” in Section 3 of the RTE Act is not limited to waiving tuition fees.
 - It implies the removal of any financial barrier that causes absenteeism or dropouts.
- Section 19 of the RTE Act mandates schools to maintain specific norms and standards, including separate toilets for boys and girls.
- Key Observations - The court observed that the lack of menstrual hygiene facilities converts a biological reality into a structural exclusion.
- Absence of sanitary products and toilet places girls at an unequal footing in schools.
- Denial of menstrual hygiene measures leads to stigma, humiliation, absenteeism, and dropouts.
- Directions to the State -
- Free Sanitary Napkins - All government and private schools must provide sanitary napkins free of cost.
 - Oxo-biodegradable sanitary napkins to ensure environmental sustainability, and should be dispensed preferably through vending machines.
- Safe Disposal - Hygienic and environmentally compliant disposal mechanisms with covered bins that are regularly cleaned.

- Functional Toilets - Gender-segregated toilets with water, privacy, accessibility, and hand-washing facilities.
- MHM Corners - “Menstrual Hygiene Management (MHM) corners” equipped with essentials like spare innerwear, spare uniforms, and disposable bags.
- Awareness & Training -
 - Gender-responsive curriculum on menstruation by NCERT/SCERT.
 - Training for all teachers.
 - Sensitisation of boys to reduce stigma.
- Monitoring - Periodic inspections and anonymous student feedback by District Education Officers (DEO).
