

Mental Health and Universities

Why in news?

\n\n

The Mental Healthcare bill was approved recently by Parliament.

\n\n

What does the Act guarantee?

\n\n

\n

- Stigmatising a mentally ill person and denying him or her necessary treatment will be illegal according to the act.

\n

- The act talks about special provision where public institutions such as universities are urged to treat mental health as a valuable public good in its own right.

\n

\n\n

What are the issue in Higher education?

\n\n

\n

- Mental health takes a back seat even within something as significant as a doctoral programme.

\n

- PhDs demand long-standing commitment on the part of the students and their beloved.

\n

- Over five-plus years, students learn to grapple with hypotheses, narrative frameworks, and research methods.

\n

- This stress might cause social regression which may affect doctoral candidates.

\n

- Apart from this there exists social and caste discrimination inside campus which further adds fuel to the stress level.

\n

- Thus the new Act talks about the necessity of teacher student interaction which might help reduce the stress level.

\n

- University spaces should be an area free from social stigma, unnecessary prejudices and should have freedom to express and believe in oneself.

\n

\n\n

Source: The Hindu

\n

