

NITI Aayog on Labour reforms

Why in news?

\n\n

NITI Aayog pitches for labour reforms in its 'Strategy for New India @75' document.

\n\n

What does it recommend?

\n\n

\n

- Codifying labour laws - In 2016, there were 44 labour laws under the statute of the Central government.

\n

- More than 100 laws fall under the jurisdiction of state governments.

\n

- Thus, the government should quickly finish codifying India's labour laws, while simplifying or modifying those that apply to the formal sector.

\n

- The National Policy for Domestic Workers should also be brought in at the earliest.

\n

- Keeping women in the workforce - The government should ensure that employers adhere to the Maternity Benefit (Amendment) Act, 2017, and the Sexual Harassment of Women at Work Place (Prevention, Prohibition and Redressal) Act.

\n

- It is also important to implement these legislations in the informal sector, and make sure that skills training programmes and apprenticeships include women.

\n

- Employment data - Data collection for the Periodic Labour Force Survey (PFLS) of households must be completed on schedule and data is disseminated by 2019.

\n

- The government should conduct an annual enterprise survey using the GST Network (GSTN) as the sample frame for this.

\n

- Along with it, administrative data from EPFO, ESIC and the NPS could be used, to track regularly the state of employment while adjusting for the formalisation of the workforce.

\n

- Workers' welfare - The government must mandatorily comply with the national floor-level minimum wage.

\n

- Also, the Minimum Wages Act, 1948 should be expanded to cover all jobs, besides enforcing the payment of wages through cheque or Aadhaar-enabled payments for all.

\n

- Social security and working conditions - There must be a compulsory registration of all establishments to ensure better monitoring of occupational safety.

\n

- A comprehensive occupational health and safety legislation based on risk assessment and employer-worker cooperation should be enacted.

\n

- Labour inspection system should be made transparent by allowing online complaints and putting in place a standardised mechanism.

\n

- Also, labour dispute resolution system should be overhauled, by strengthening labour courts or tribunals to help resolve disputes quickly and fairly.

\n

- Skills and apprenticeships - According to the India Skill Report 2018, only 47% of those coming out of higher educational institutions are employable.

\n

- Thus, forming the Labour Market Information System (LMIS) is important for identifying skill shortages, training needs and new employment opportunities.

\n

- Through LMIS, the government should ensure the wider use of apprenticeship programmes by all enterprises, which may require enhancing the government stipend.

\n

\n\n

What are the concerns?

\n\n

\n

- NITI Aayog is stuck on a misguided notion that labour flexibility will boost investment, thereby ignoring skilling and other factors.

\n

- The mere amendments in labour laws have neither succeeded in attracting big investments, boost to industrialisation or to job creation.

\n

- According to the Ease of Doing Business Index (2014), only a little over one-tenth of the respondent firms in India perceived labour regulations as a major constraint.

\n

\n\n

\n

- Hence, rapid industrialisation, growth in investments and job creation would ultimately depend on –

\n

\n\n

\n

1. Development of infrastructure
2. Stable law and order
3. Availability of skilled manpower
- 4.

\n

\n

\n

\n

\n\n

\n

1. Boost in skill upgradation

\n

\n\n

\n

- Also, extension of maternity benefit to 26 weeks under the amended Maternity Benefit Act has adversely affected employment prospects.
- This is because the employers hesitate to hire female workforce, especially in the case of start-ups.
- To overcome this, the government has recently proposed to subsidise wages of female workers earning less than Rs. 15,000.
- However, it has little to say on the gender composition of committees and institutions created under the labour laws to enforce the measure.

\n

- Also, trade union recognition law is still absent in most States and at the national level.

\n

- Thus, the NITI Aayog needs to really retool itself to be able to come up with a balanced and conceptually consistent labour market and industrial relations strategy, to deliver quality jobs and inclusive growth.
