

Resolving Power Sector NPAs - II

Why in news?

\n\n

\n

- The Allahabad High Court has decided to deny interim relief to power companies from the RBI's February 12 circular.

What is the RBI's directive?

\n\n

\n

- The RBI circular sets a 180-day deadline for the resolution of all non-performing assets.

\n

- It requires banks to finalise a resolution plan within this.

\n

- This is in case of a default on large accounts of Rs 20 billion or more.

\n

- Failing this, insolvency proceedings will have to be invoked against the defaulter.

\n

- The assets would be taken to the National Company Law Tribunal (NCLT).

\n

- The central bank also introduced the concept of a one-day default.

\n

- Under this, banks have to identify incipient stress even when repayments are overdue by a day.

What is the petition?

\n\n

\n

- Nearly 70 large companies with a debt of around Rs 3.8 trillion would have to face Insolvency and Bankruptcy Code proceedings.
\n
- Three-fourths of this debt pertains to a handful of power producers.
\n
- As many as 34 power plants, with a combined capacity of 39 GW, have been identified as stressed assets.
\n
- Power producers were not the only ones hesitant on submitting to the IBC process.
\n
- The government and even the lenders, mostly public sector banks, were also not keen on implementing the RBI circular.
\n
- They argued that the power sector's problems had more to do with external factors.
\n

\n\n

Why is the Court's decision significant?

\n\n

- It is RBI's discretion to decide whether any particular sector deserves regulatory exceptions.
\n
- In this case, it has decided against granting any exception, which is a sound, rule-based approach.
\n
- Any judicial intervention would have sent a wrong signal to other defaulters.
\n
- They would have then started seeking judicial reprieve from the RBI's circulars.
\n
- So the high court has consciously avoided a precedent that could have been misused.
\n
- It has done its bit by ensuring the RBI's position as an independent regulator.
\n
- It is not yet clear whether the power producers will move the Supreme Court.
\n
- Till that happens, the RBI deadline stands and banks are bound to start IBC proceedings.
