

Rising Gold Imports

What is the issue?

\n\n

∖n

- India's gold imports in the first four months of this fiscal have doubled in value from the year-ago period.
 - ∖n
- This has contributed to a threefold expansion in the merchandise trade deficit. $$\n$
- Given the role of gold imports in trade imbalances, it calls for deeper analysis and vigilance.

\n

\n\n

What are the reasons?

\n\n

\n

• Earlier in the year, fears of high tariffs under GST led to the gold trade stockpiling material.

\n

- Later, gold imports spiked as a result of a tariff loophole that allowed zeroduty imports from South Korea.
- Pre-GST, the government curbed certain previously waived custom duties (under free trade pacts such as with South Korea) by a countervailing duty (CVD).

\n

- Post- GST, as CVD got subsumed by it, gold imports from these regimes suddenly turned cheaper, resulting this route being used for round-tripping. \n
- Both these onetime and existing structural factors have contributed to the recent surge in gold imports. $\gamman \ensuremath{\n}$

\n\n

What is the way forward?

\n\n

\n

- To address round-tripping, centre should consider measures such as a safeguard duty or minimum value-addition norms for exports. \n
- Policy intervention is essential to curb opportunistic imports of gold. $\ensuremath{\sc vn}$
- However, Centre should refrain from hasty measures to suppress genuine consumption demand for gold. \n
- This is because, unlike in the past, demand for gold is likely to be more consumption oriented than an investment one. \n
- Also, given the formalisation of the jewellery industry after demonetisation and GST, only a business-as-usual approach can work in favour of the economy at present.
