

Striking Down of Beggary Act

Why in news?

 $n\n$

\n

- Delhi High Court has struck down as unconstitutional, certain sections of Bombay Prevention of Beggary Act, 1959, as extended to Delhi.
- It, thereby, has decriminalised beggary.

 $n\n$

What is the Act about?

 $n\n$

\n

- There is no any central Act in India on beggary.
- Hence many states and Union Territories have used the Bombay Prevention of Beggary Act, 1959 as the basis for their own laws.
- The objective was to keep the streets of then Bombay clear of the destitute, leprosy patients or the mentally ill.
- It was formulated with the hope that they could be sent into institutions.

 $n\n$

What are the contentious provisions?

 $n\n$

\n

- The Act, essentially, criminalises begging.
- It gives police the power to arrest individuals without a warrant.
- It gives magistrates the power to commit them to a "certified institution" (a detention centre).

\n

- Detention could be up to 3 years on the commission of the first "offence", and up to 10 years upon the second "offence".
- Their privacy and dignity is ignored by compelling them to allow themselves to be fingerprinted.

\n

• It authorises the detention of people "dependant" upon the "beggar" (read as family) and separation of children over the age of 5.

\n

- Certified institutions have absolute power over detainees.
- This includes the power of punishment, and the power to exact "manual work".

\n

• Disobeying the rules of the institution can land an individual in jail.

 $n\n$

\n

• There were concerns that the Act was violating the fundamental rights of the citizen.

۱'n

• The Delhi HC order is the first in the country to strike down provisions of the 1959 Act.

\n

 $n\n$

What is the Court's order and observations?

 $n\n$

\n

Among the 25 provisions struck down are those:

 $n$

\n

- i. permitting the arrest, without a warrant, any person found begging $$
- ii. taking the person to court

\n

iii. conducting a summary inquiry

\n

iv. detaining the person for up to 10 years \n

\n

• The court has not struck down provisions that do not treat beggary per se as an offence.

\n

• It has also not struck down a Section that deals with penalty for employing or causing persons to beg.

۱n

• This addresses forced begging or "begging rackets", which are used to justify retaining the Act.

\n

• Activists advocating repeal of the Act, however, say that these can be dealt with existing provisions in the Indian Penal Code.

• Observations - The Bench held that the Begging Act violated Article 14 and Article 21 of the Constitution.

\n

• The government argued that it did not intend to criminalise "involuntary" begging.

۱n

• Court, however, noted that the definition of begging under the Act made no such distinction and therefore entirely arbitrary.

\n

• It also held that under Art 21, it was the State's responsibility to provide the basic necessities for survival to all its citizens.

۱n

• It stressed that poverty was the result of the state's inability or unwillingness to discharge these obligations.

\n

• Therefore, the state could not criminalise the most visible and public manifestation of its own failures.

\n

 $n\n$

What are the alternatives?

 $n\n$

\n

- Bill The Centre made an attempt at repealing the Act through the Persons in Destitution (Protection, Care and Rehabilitation) Model Bill, 2016.
- \bullet It had provisions including doing away with the Beggary Act and some provisions also allowed detention. $\mbox{\sc h}$

- ullet It also proposes rehabilitation centres for the destitute in each district.
- But the discussion on the Bill was halted in 2016.
- Bihar model Bihar government has the Mukhyamantri Bhikshavriti Nivaran Yojana in place.
- Under this, instead of detaining persons under the Act, open homes were set up.
- \bullet Through this, community outreach for destitute persons was put in place. $\ensuremath{^{\text{h}}}$
- Now, rehabilitation centres have been set up, with facilities for treatment, family reintegration and vocational training.

 $n\n$

 $n\n$

Source: Indian Express

\n

