

Q. Developing Countries like India contribute more climate-related finance than many countries in the Global North. Analyse how this could benefit India in becoming the leader of the Global South. (250W)

India and China have given $765 Million and $1,236 Million to Developing countries as a climate finance, respectively. But Developed Countries like E.U, U.S.A, ... have ~~to give~~ failed to donate $100 Billion by 2020, extending to 2025.

The Global North have 25% of the world Population and earns 80% of the wealth. They tend to dominate Global South both politically and Economically but failed to cooperate with Common but differentiated responsibility (CBDR) as per Historical emission.

This significant hypocrisy poses a opportunity for India to take the position of the Leader for Global South.

How?

- Declining Confidence on Developed Countries from Global South.
- Neutral and Socialist nature of Indian brings in Trust and faith from developing and under-developed countries.
- India's Empathy will be showcased.
- Developing countries join hands for Mutual Development.
- Increased Bilateral Trade, Military Operations.
- Financing shows India's Self-less nature and commitment towards Global Good.
- Brings Investments & Partnership.

⇒ Climate-related Financing is the need of the hour. India's investment will not only asserts its image but also it would make India as a Face of Global South.
