

* Do you think that, the administrative machinery in the country is driving the citizens away from its Government services? Analyse, in the context of ethical governance. (200 words).

Ethical governance being done happens when governance is conducted according to sound ethical principle.

Bureaucracy have improved a lot in delivering services over the years due to

- * The use of technology.
- * The role out of RTI act.
- * The recruitment of more and more efficient officers.
- * People becoming more aware and empowered.
- * Politicians being more sensitive to service delivery.

But certain problems that alienate people from Government services still persists. Eg:

- * Bureaucratic red tapes still persists.
- * Administration being insensitive and reactive at times.
- * Unethical practises of certain officials.
- * More and more political interference over officers.

* Excessive powers handed out by new and old laws like national security act, UAPA etc.

Overall, the efficiency and ethicality of government services have improved but we still are very behind on that excellent target mark.
